  - a. Dr. William Graves –Dean, Graduate College \_graves@iastate.edu
    - i. Senator: On the creative components, I know that a lot of students of professors with lots of industry connections have to do a CC for intellectual property restrictions. How will disclosure of industry-sponsored CCs work?
    - ii. WG: Theses/Dissertations have embargoes, so we could probably handle it that way as well.
    - iii. Senator: An idea – could have each department organize master's/phd orientations, lay out expectations, show CVs of recent graduates, discuss timelines since it would be good to know before beginning PhD.
    - iv. WG: Present orientation status is that there is a general graduate college orientation for new students, which is largely a social/welcome event with representatives from various campus offices, which does not get to what you mentioned. Many departments/programs have their own orientations, more along those lines, but it's not required and they vary a lot. It sounds like your suggestion is that the GC ensure that there is some minimum level of department/program orientation.
